Young Aviators Program application deadline is April 15. Young Aviators uses aviation as an appetizer to get young people excited about STEM education. The program puts 14- to 18-year-old teens in the pilot seat through the daily simulator and real aircraft training. All training is done in a pleasant, informal atmosphere at the 838 EAA Chapter, located at Batten International Airport, in Racine. The five-day 2019 program will run from August 5 through 9. In addition to flying, the class week will include 30 hours of classroom study in principles of flight, physics, chemistry, math and other subjects related to aviation. Students also attend a daily hangar workshop class that introduces the use of manufacturing tools to make a real aircraft component. This is a volunteer-led program that works to inspire students to “dream big dreams” and develop the skills needed to make those dreams come true. To learn more, visit www.young-aviators.com or call 681-2528.
